

Tierra Rodgers
Ms. Williams
Multicultural Lit and Comp
March 10, 2016

Sentence Outline

I. Introduction

- A. Hook: “An apple a day keeps the doctor away, and grooming frequently does this equally,” (Kazlauskas). When it comes to animals, many people fail to understand this essential concept of grooming.
- B. Content: The grooming process doesn’t always come with ease. Depending on the furry-friend and groomer, the process could be a tough, hair-pulling hassle or something effortlessly achieved. However, the multitude of struggle in grooming pets should not astray one to complete this imperative task. The key is not to relinquish. Practice truly does make perfect! A routined grooming session gives animals the opportunity to get comfortable with process, and it enhances the cleaning and coaching skills of the groomer. Above of all, the service issues a number of benefits.
- C. Thesis: Because most humans are companions of pets, a proper grooming service on pets could introduce positive physical impacts, health influences, and even psychological effects on the behalf of both species.

II. Body

- A. The physical toll pet grooming has on animals and humans can take on plethora of benefits. Animals and humans use physical parts of their bodies for their ability to transport to different regions, to consume food and water, and to contain a discrete appearance from other creatures. So it's no question that somatic parts must be maintained and groomed, seeing that we are greatly dependent on them.
 - 1. The use of effective dry-cleaning tools is a great way to start.
 - a. The tools’ scalp stimulation and rigorous brushing assist in spreading out the skin’s natural oils across the animal’s hair channels, balancing out both dryness and oiliness (Szabo).
 - b. A lack of frequently brushing and combing a pet’s tangled, dead hair produces an unpleasant formation called a matt. If not tended to, these matts pursue their way into the pet’s skin and trigger excessive pain as they grow in size and tease frail skin. Less hair and skin is tugged on when this particular part the grooming service is performed more frequently (Moore).
 - c. Mattes also form sores which creates storage for moisture. This could result in infection and in the unwanted appearance of fungus around the body (American Kennel Club 45).
 - 2. Orthodox shampoo provides physical benefits as well.
 - a. All shampoos that contain neem oil, a demulcent excerpt of the neem tree, ensure a glossy hair coat, soothes skin irritation, and even acts as a shield via the skin to mosquitos and flies due to the bloodstream’s absorption of the oil (Szabo).
 - b. To keep a pet healthy and alive longer, shampoos with chemicals such as sulfates, paraben, phthalates, DMDM hydantoin, and artificial coloring and fragrances should be avoided when grooming. Shampoos without these chemicals will reduce skin irritation, deodorize skunky smells that lurk pets and homes, and even brighten the animal's coat (Szabo).

3. The trimming and cutting portion of a grooming session introduces easier ways to maneuver and relieves danger to some.
 - a. Overgrown nails are inclined to being damaged, and they are a danger to pets and pet holders. Too long of nails make walking and eating a struggle for animals, and as for pet holders, these elongated nails of the animal can be a source of major wounds and injuries (The Baker Shop).
 - b. Animals cool off by panting and by air circulating around. Long hairs impede that ability, so a frequent trim or cut will improve this circulation and allow the animal to cool off easier (American Kennel Club 46).